cv. I am actually afraid to marry.

Afraid! echoed the lady, opening her dark eyes to their widest extent with astonishment -Faint heart never won, you know. Are you "! secquia to propose!

* No, saadam, afraid to marry You will solitary state, which seems so much to excite your surprise.

'Why, yes,' replied Mrs Hinton, 'one is alout meaning to flatter you-is certainly a favorite in society, (here Mr Norton made her a polile bow,) and who has an independent fortune, still refrains from choosing one of the many fair damsels whom he meets, to superintend his establishment. But what influence your scat in church can have upon the matter, I am at a loss had concluded, when she said, pettishlyto imagine.'

'You must know, then, that I sit just behind Miss La Mode, in Dr. Righthead's church, and see how becoming this is the sight of her velvet cloak absolutely frightens art's and buy one.' How I should shudder to hear such a request.'

Really, Mr Norton, this is too absurd for you, with your fortune, to talk in such a manner. I it would not injure you. And surely you do not object to a lady's wearing a velvet cloak?'

'I do not object to any thing that is consist ent, but I cannot help thinking splendid velvet, such as Queen Victoria herself might be satisplace when it is made into a cloak to wear on almost all occasions; particularly when it is well known that Miss La Mode's father does not sell it for what it would bring.'
Mrs Hinton sat silent at this speech. Her conscience reproached her, for she knew that tures, as he found difficult, in those trying times, was a woman, however, of generous feelings, as to address Mr Norton, when an over-dressed the mind of the thoughtless and selfish girl, young lady, who had been sitting, an interested and she saw her depart, to fulfil her intention. listener in the conversation, interposed

"It Mr Norton wants an economical wife," she said, 'I would recommend him to offer himself to Emily Harwood. I think she will suit him exactly, for she has worn an old cloak all winter, with no alteration-one that she has had two years at least to my knowledge."

Mr Norton looked at the speaker, and the unamable expression of her countenance sunk her in his estimation forever, although he had hitherto regarded her as very pretty and interesting, and had sometimes even thought it almost possible to love Caroline Howard well enough to marry her, if he could only hope to cure her of the passion for dress which she displayed. But this remark sealed her fate as far as he was concerned, and turning to Mrs Hinton, he asked-

Who is Emily Harwood? Are you acquainted with her? I should really like to be introduced to a young lady who has moral courage enough to wear an unfashionable garment, after having worn it already two winters; she must possess more than common character.

"I will introduce you with pleasure," said Mrs Hinton Sue is a sweet girl and a great favorite of mine. I confess I have myself been surprised at the plainness of her dress, this winter, for her father is considered wealthy, and she is the only one of his daughters of an age to go into society. That is she in the simple white ther's storehouse, No 89 North Third street, a frock, and that is her mother by her side

Mr Norton was charmed to perceive that it was a young lady who by her singularly modest young man was the result. and unpretending appearance, had attreated his attention in the early part of the evening. He had intended to inquire her name, but lost sight of her in the crowd, and supposed she had retired. She received him with an easy, graceful air, and aiter a few moments passed in conversation, he thought her positively beautiful, so intelligent was the expression of her dark blue eyes, and so beaming the smile with she listened to his lively remarks. He was also very much pleased with Mrs Harwood, who did not leave to her daughter the whole burden of the conversation, as some mothers are apt to do. contenting themselves with being mere specta-

When Mr Norton laid his head upon the pillow that night, it was long before he could compose his mind to sleep, so much was he d storbed by the vision of a pair of blue eyes which danced before him, not to mention dark ranglets and old clocks, which mangled together in strange confusion. He began to think that he had at list found the object he had been so long seeking, and resolving that he would call the next day at Mr. Harwood's, at last resigned himself to repose

The next morning Mrs. Hinton, in pursuance of the wise resolution she had made attired herselt to go out, and was waiting in the parlor for that otherwise might become an ornament to her carriage The beautiful mantle lay on the the country in France and England vocal mu sola hy her side, and she was examining it, and sie has been introduced into infant schools with making up her mind that, after all, she could do success, the system of instruction being that without it, and if she could that she ought to - originating in Swatzerland, and now so success At this moment, Caroline Howard, who was an fully pursued by M. Musical Instruction.

The New York Republic in a notice of a musical exhibition of young children in that city a few evenings since introduced the following remarks relative to musical metruction which are worthy consideration:-In Germany a system of musical instruction for youth has been formed a part of general education, from which a taste has sprung up that has made that country the first in the world for instrumental music, both in composition and execution. This taste has produced many mestimable blessings in all the German states, amongst the toremost of which may be stated that home gives an innocent and mexpensive pleasure to all the members of a tamily, that raises them mentally in the scale of humanity, however humble their fortune. In Belgium, schools for general matruction in vocal music have been, for nearly twenty years, established in Ghent and Brus els, where the children arpear before the public twice a year, and sing c'o ruses and canons, the government wisely prohibiting solos of any kind, upon the paternal principle that to create in carly youth a love of display and public applause, is one of the surest meana of curbing future progress, and in too many cases of runing the prospects of a youth

SURJECT TO THE DECISION OF THE BALTIMORE WHIC CONVENTION.

SEE FIRST PAGE.

The Belfast Journal, quite a curiosity in te way, boldly and either recklessly or ignorantly asserts, that the proposed loco tariff bill of Mr McKay, which proposes to lay a duty of twenty five per cent. ad valorem on potatoes, gives a larger protection to the cultivators of potatoes than the present tariff law which lays a specific duty of ten cents a bushel. If the Journal knows anything about the matter, it knows that this is a false statement. The Democrat in this city, declares that the average price of potatoes in this market is twenty five cents, and it is well known that the average price of potatoes in Nova Scotia is less than it is here; butfor the sake of the argument we will suppose the price to be the same, and twenty five per cent. ad valorem would give a duty of only six cents and a quarter a bushel! And yet the editor of that Journal, by bold and unblushing falsehood, attempts to cheat its readers in a simple calculation of figures. Such villainy deserves the severest censure. It cannot be that the pen holder of the Journal estimates sufficiently high the intelligence of its readers, even in "bleeding Waldo."

The Tyler papers are out strongly for John Tyler as a candidate for the Presidency, and pretend there is no trouble in electing him! | trade school although not strictly a party pa-This appears to us as the sublimest humbug of the times. The machinery of a National Convention is in the course of construction, and all the forms of nominating him as the candidate of the pure 'Democracy,' are to be gone through with, and his name is to be imposingly borne at the head of several prints supported by the patronage of the government. The captain, it is said, relishes all this finely, and verily believes he shall succeed in his darling plan. It is of no use for any one to undertake the work of undeceiving him; but he will some morning wake up and find how grossly and foolishly he has been deceived by his pretended friends.

IF We learn from the Boston Post, that the "Statistics of Lowell Manufactures" for January 1st, 1844, make the total capital employed ty. $10,650,000, including the Middlesex at $950,-600, which is its present capital, with added pronts, and dividend of surplus. The number of yards of cloth made in Lowell, is now stated at 74,141,600, and the consumption of cotton 22,880,000 lbs., or 57,240 bales. A pound makes 31-5 average yards. The consumption of wool by the Middlesex Company, is a million pounds. Average wages of males 70 cents per day besides board, and females $1.75 clear of board, per week. The number of hands employed is 5205 females, and 2345 males.

Important to the Arts.

The National Intelligencer states, that the Hon. ZADOC PRATT, a practical mechanic, has introduced a resolution in the House of Representatives, providing for the publication and engraving of all inventions patented in the Patent i)ffice at Washington, which now amount to thirteen thousand five, hundred and twentythree; and that is his intention to have copies of these works distributed, at the expense of the office, throughout every town in the United States, so that the numerous classes of our citizens, whose genius or talent may lead them to the discovery of new inventions, may know and have constantly on hand, a complete compend and view of all the models and draughts of the machines for which patents have been issued since the foundation of the government.

We ought, perhaps, to notice that a Belfast correspondent of the Portland Argus states that our correspondent, in speaking of the employment of men to cut the ice out of Belfast harbor, mistook as to the number of days, it being three, instead of about a week. Neither Belfast or Frankfort harbors are often closed with ice, but some of the days last winter were very cold and those harbors were both frozen

What is a Festival?

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier. Webster says that a testival is a time of feasting; an anniversary day of joy, civil or religious. Crabb says a festival is kept by mirth and testivity; some feasts are festivals, as in the case of the criminal at Rome; some festivals are holidays, as in the case of weddings and public thanksgivings.' The definition Walker gives to festival is, 'pertaining to feasts, joyous.' And in this sense Milton uses it; or in Samson Ag-

" Mess. Occasions drew me early to this city, And as the gates I entered with sunrise. The morning trumpets festival proclaim'd, Through each high street."

Having such authority we have been in the abit of attaching to the word the definition they have given to it, and we did not suspect that we were in error until we read in the Gazette of Thursday the following passage.

ment, two festivals designed as special recognition to God and providential dependence upon him not indicate the recognition to God and providential dependence upon him not indicate the recognition to God and providential dependence upon the recognition to God and providential dependence upon the recognition to God and providential dependence upon the recognition of God and Providential dependence upon the recognition him, not individuals merely, but as communities or States: the autumnal Thanksgiving for the bounties God has poured into the lap of the year, and the spring fast for the confession of ் வாள்ளத் இரு

It may be that we err, but we cannot rid outselves of the idea that a Fast day is the reverse of a day of feasting, or of mirth and feativity.-The editor of the Gazette, being M. C. C. and one of the S. S. C. can probably give his au- 10 Cases Seal Boots, thority for calling a fast a festival.

CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 17.

In the Senate, as we learn from the N.Y. Express, the Naval Appropriation Bill from the House, authorizing the use of $116,000 now in the Department, for the immediate wants of the service, was passed finally.

Amendments of the House to the Revolutionary Pension Bill were concurred in and passed. The Post Office Bill was then considered and debated upon the proposition to abolish the franking privilege.

In the House, Mr. Hardin reported a bill from the Military Committee, appropriating $50,000 for a Western Amory, to be located at Massack, near the mouth of the Ohio river.

The House then went into debate on the Western Harbor Bill, and the whole question of internal improvements in the abstract, was discussed at much length.

Washington, Thursday, April 18. In the Senate, the morning hour was occupied in the presentation of memorials on different subjects, which was all the business done.

"The surprising effect produced by the genuine Dr. Taylor's Balsam of Liverwort, made at 375 Bowery, in consumptive cases, cannot fail exciting a deep and thrilling interest throughout the world. We have so long considered this disease (consump ses when we see persons, evidently consumptive, restored to health. Yet it is a fact of daily occurrence. Certificates from the highest and most respectable sources, or persons who have been either greatly relieved by it, or entirely recovered from affections of the Lungs and Liver, could be furnished in abundance, but we insert only the following CERTIFICATE. Liver Complaint and General Dibility. I was given up by two physicians, and told to prepare for death. I was so weak I could not raise my hand to my head. I was in this low state, when a friend sent me a bottle of Dr. Taylor's Balsam of Liverwort, from 375 Bowery, and before I had used up the bottle, I was able to sit up in bed. By the fur-ther use I have completely regained my health. GEO. WELLS, 23 John-st.
